Mark Schoenberg, the Bernard L. Schwartz Distinguished Professor of Urologic Oncology and Director of Urologic Oncology, attended Yale University graduating with a major in Russian Studies in 1980. After college, he worked in research at The University of Texas M. D. Anderson Cancer Center and then completed an M.D. degree in 1986 at the University of Texas in Houston.

Dr. Schoenberg served as a resident in general surgery and urology at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania between 1986 and 1992. In 1992, he entered a two year research fellowship under the auspices of The American Cancer Society at the James Buchanan Brady Urological Institute. During his fellowship, Dr. Schoenberg explored the molecular biology of the androgen receptor, concentrating on the implications of polymorphic repeat length in androgen independent prostate cancer. In 1994, Dr. Schoenberg joined the faculty of the Brady Institute, where he has developed a clinical practice devoted to the care of patients with invasive bladder cancer.

During his tenure at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions, Dr. Schoenberg has established the Bladder Cancer Research Center at the University, authored a book on bladder cancer for patients entitled "The Guide to Living with Bladder Cancer," and devoted additional time to the creation of a multidisciplinary oncology program. He has served as Associate Editor of Urology and Assistant Editor of The Journal Urology, and now serves as Senior Editor of Seminars in Urologic Oncology and Chairperson of the Scientific Advisory Board of The Bladder Cancer Advocacy Network.
